* Have no means of furnishing this return with that accuracy a House of Commons order requires. Letters and personal applications from people unable to write, and demanding forms of admission, have been, however, very numerous and very pressing; several patients have been brought to the gate, and refused admission, from the over-crowded state of the house; attempts have been even made to put patients across the boundary walls.

N. B.—The increased expense for building this year is in consequence of painting of the establishment, repairing damages by storm, fitting up a cow-house, replacing a cistern, and alterations in laundry.

The increased number of patients rendered it necessary to provide an additional supply of bedsteads, bedding, clothes and furniture, for 20 patients, which has also rendered these heads higher than usual.
